CLEVELAND -- Cuyahoga County Prosecutor Bill Mason said a jury has found Stacey Mathews guilty on six counts of felonious assault after a five-day trial.

On April 19, Mathews, 23, of Cleveland, recruited co-defendant Cedrica Johnson, 24, of East Cleveland, to help her confront two females -- ages 17 and 19 -- both of whom were waiting in line to interview for a position at McDonald's near East 105th Street.

After Mathews drove to the McDonald's, Johnson got out and threatened the victims with scissors.

McDonald's employees attempted to break up the confrontation when Matthews got into her car, reversed it and struck five victims, including the owner of the McDonald's.

Both Matthews and Johnson drove off in Matthews' car.

Cleveland Police located the car near East 107th Street and St. Clair Avenue.

Johnson was present and was arrested. Matthews ran off but eventually turned herself in to Cleveland Police.

On December 22, after a bench trial, Judge Robert McClelland found Johnson guilty of assault, a misdemeanor of the first degree, for her participation in the incident.

Both her sentencing date and the sentencing date for Mathews is pending.
